

Union committee wants guidelines

The Senate Sub-Committee for the Expansion of the University Centre has asked groups using the building to present outlines of future needs as a guide in the formulation of plans for enlargement.

In particular, Vice-President for Development C.A. Winkler has asked for information on the use of the bookstore and cafeteria.

The situation in the cafeteria is extreme, with up to 2200 students seeking feeding space at peak hours. Many are forced to sit on radiators.

Conditions in the bookstore reach maximum deterioration during the Fall rush, and suggestions of accommodation in separate buildings or substations have been broached as possible solutions.

Radio McGill, the Players' Club and the McGill Daily have also been asked for information as to future requirements.

The adequacy of the present union was brought into question at a December 1 meeting of the sub-committee when it was decided that a review of the whole situation should be made. The scope of the prospective report was revised when student officials de-

Unrestricted recruiting now 'university policy'

by JUDI SEIDMAN

Senate Secretary Colin McDougall announced last night that the University considers the Placement Committee's report to be "the official decision of the University."

In making the statement, he established the legal status of the Senate to speak for the University.

COLIN McDOUGALL
"the official decision"

The decision, announced Friday by the Placement Committee was that "there should be no discrimination or limitation placed on interviews between the students and bona fide employers interested in using the McGill Placement Service's facilities."

The decision was made on the grounds that a policy limiting recruitment would "make the operation of the Placement Service less effective by discouraging its normal use by students and employers alike, thereby depriving a large portion of the student body of the rights and benefits that the service can provide".

Dean Maxwell Cohen of Law, one of the members of the Tripartite Commission, said that although this decision was adopted by a majority of the Senate it is proper for any question to appear before the Commission for discussion.

He said, however, that the task of discrimination among companies is a hard one. "Thousands of economies contribute to the US and thus to the Viet Nam war. This would mean Canada would have to stop all economic dealing with the US. This is virtually impossible".

Richard Burkart, Students' Society Vice-President for External Affairs, one of the student members of the Commission, said that he was not sure whether the Commission would consider this report an area for investigation. "We have the power to look into it", he said.

"we have the power to look into it"

Burkart commented that Dr. Pavlasek's statement showed recognition of the fact that the Tripartite Commission "must have a free hand".

When asked for his personal opinion on the matter, Burkart said that he had yet to see a good set of criteria pinpointing the companies which supply materials to Viet Nam.

He pointed out that the McGill list of companies allegedly making war materials for use in Viet Nam was totally different from that at SGWU. "Are we trying to draw attention to the war in Viet Nam through these companies?" he asked. Answering his own question Burkart replied he thought this was the case.

Barry Crago, Chairman of the Association to End the War in Viet Nam said that he considered the Placement Committee's report to be self contradictory.

"They are making moral judgements on one hand while they say that the only accepted criteria for recruiting is legal verification", he said.

"Action is being planned to engage the university in moral debate and to prove their inability to remain neutral," he added.

American activists plan world-wide student strike

by HARVEY WASSERMAN
Collegiate Press Service

CHICAGO — More than 900 student activists from the United States and Latin America have called for a world-wide student strike "against the war in Viet Nam and racism."

The students announced plans for the strike during a conference here last weekend sponsored by the Student Mobilization Committee, a New York-based organization which helped plan large-scale demonstrations in New York and California last April 15 and the massive demonstration at the Pentagon October 21.

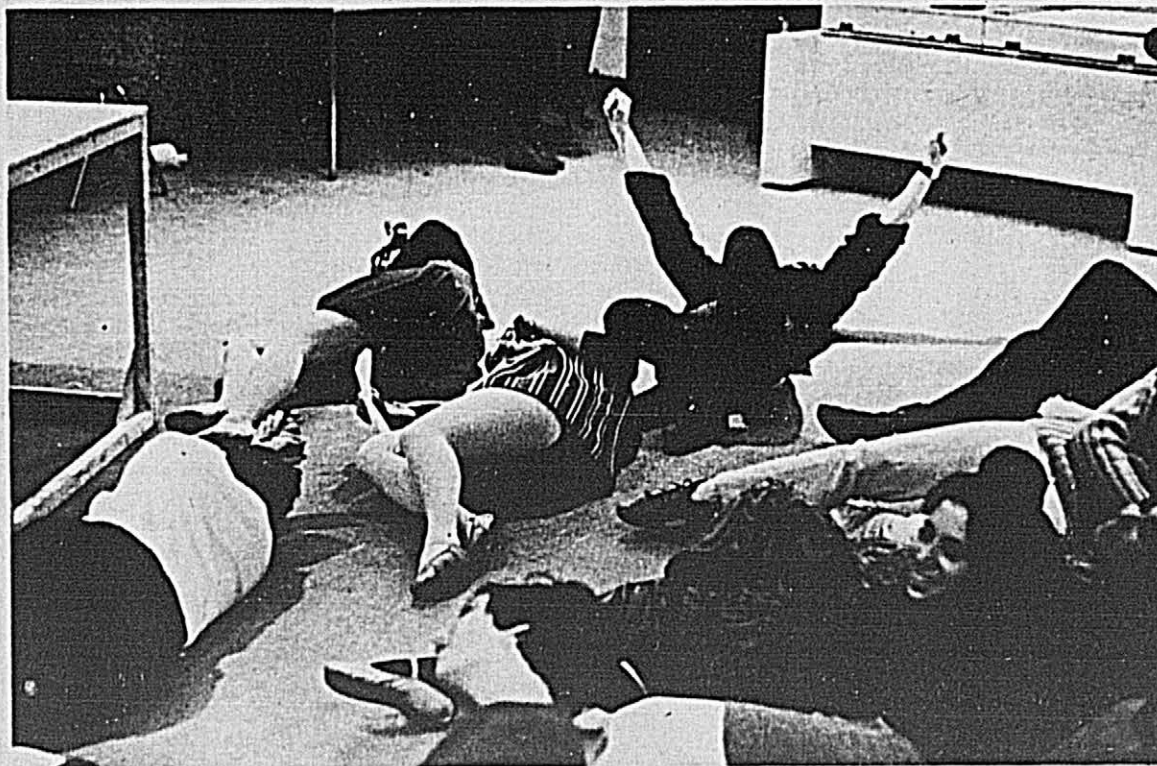

The strike will be held Friday, April 26, in the midst of 10 days of concentrated anti-war activity scheduled for April 20 to April 30. The 10-day period coincides with the "Ten Days to Snake the Empire" program announced at a national meeting of Students for a Democratic Society last December.

The black caucus at the conference last weekend called for a strike against "imperialism, racism, and the draft."

The majority of students attending the conference strongly supported the strike, but there was still some opposition centered largely around charges that the Student Mobilization Committee is a "manipulative, elitist organization without a broad-based constituency."

Some students also charged that the Student Mobilization Committee is a "manipulative, elitist organization without a broad-based constituency."

strike was a bad tactic because it does not stem from nor does it contribute to building a 'grass roots' anti-war movement.

STUDENT HOUSING CRISIS: You can't sleep in Moyse Hall if your loan didn't come through, but try rolling in the aisles at the Red and White Revue. Seats are also available. Buy now and avoid the rush when the flower children invade. They're coming to the Union Thursday at 1 pm, at which time flowers will be distributed to the unsuspecting public.

STAFFERS FOR THIS ISSUE

I beat you Danny, it's 11:35, but you can guess what I'm still waiting for. The big news of the day is that green berets are manufactured in Toronto, no joke. It's no joke that I hope Rita gets well soon, as does Marc and everyone else. Notice to all those taking Poli Sci 361, class cancelled today, Stan can't read his notes. Leslie, I don't know what I would have done without you, Seymour, Gareth, Clara, Sam, Judi, and others helped too, while the lucky ones went to see the funny flicks. What's happening with McGill's participation in the yet-to-be-established English CEGEPs?

The latest word we have is that the CEGEPs — two-year post-secondary technical and general colleges — will be in operation by 1969. We also know that McGill is currently engaged in intensive negotiations with the provincial government on its part in running a college for the first few years of the program.

Vice-Principal Oliver recently released a statement to staff, reprinted in the McGill Bulletin, in which he says "It is obviously desirable that all members of staff who may become involved in college-level teaching have a chance to express themselves and to participate in the proposed transitional arrangements."

This is quite an understatement. For it appears that since the Vice-Principal outlined "the conditions and limitations under which McGill would be willing to participate" in a letter to the government last October 31, the actions taken by the McGill Administration in the name of the university have been meeting with lively faculty reaction.

Dr. Oliver goes on to mention "curriculum questions, financial problems, ... admissions problems ..." as some of "the most important points discussed". What curriculum questions? What financial problems? What admissions problems?

Many of the McGill staff have said loud and clear that they do not want these questions to be left to Administration and government technocrats. So an extensive process of consultation is underway — with the staff. The only people now left out are those who will be most directly affected by the decisions — the students of Quebec.

Much of the responsibility lies with the Students' Society. Is there an External Affairs committee studying the proposals? Where are the questions — which the staff saw fit to pose — directed at Michael Oliver about his negotiations with the government? How, for instance, will the colleges affect the structure of the Students' Society 18 months from now?

Just what decisions are being made on the curricula of students who will follow us in three or four years? Are the reforms merely structural ones, leaving the same stultifying content, or will we see a qualitative change in the learning process? As the technocrats push around their curricula and costs-per-student and projections-from-present-trends on their flow charts, the students, who are now as concerned as anyone else about learning environments, should be asking the tough questions it would be so much simpler to forget.

Absurd

Sir,

There is a point where reality and honest cynicism end, and outright lies begin. Walter Teague, head of the US Committee to Aid the National Liberation Front, has reached this point. His accusations against Senator Eugene McCarthy and his unique interpretation of American anti-gun legislation border on the absurd. Listening to Teague articulate his ideas can only inspire in the observer a deep faith in human nature with which, in all fairness, he must regard this saviour of the oppressed.

Without grounds, Teague maintains that McCarthy is consciously trying to divert the attention of the anti-war movement, attempting to take the protesters off the street and involve them in a futile election struggle. This is not a description of the man who said, in answer to the criticism of the US Vice-President, that the end of the Vietnam War was worth the breakup of the Democratic Party.

Teague claims the anti-gun legislation is part of a plot against the American left. It is, he says, but a means of taking guns away from left-wing revolutionaries. This is utter nonsense. The greatest opponents of anti-gun legislation is the American ultra right, led by such organizations as the Minutemen and the John Birch Society.

However, this curious alliance between "left" and right is not at all so curious when one takes a close, rational look at the situation. Walter Teague supports revolution in the United States. The Vietnam War has created the ideal situation for the strengthening of his organization, for it has brought with it dissension and radicalism. The aim of the ultra right and the aim of the so-called US Committee to Aid the NLF are the same — the continuation of the war in Vietnam. To Walter Teague a revolutionary society must be obtained in the US — even if this means a continuation of the criminal slaughter of the people of Vietnam.

Teague speaks of freedom of expression and a new society; what he means is freedom of his expression and a new establishment. His propaganda is as factual as Time Magazine, and as subtle as the New York Daily News.

And the N.L.F.?

Sir,

Given the Senate's decision to allow "any bona fide employer" to recruit on campus, could you please clarify the university's position on pimps?

Norman Spector, BA 2

Soon

Sir,

We have been continuously informed this year, on every occasion that the question of our participation in UGEQ is brought up, how much UGEQ is doing for the individual student, the young intellectual worker that he is. One major project always brought up to show us how much good UGEQ is doing is the CRS project — the student discount service; in fact, as little as ten days ago, this item was again brought up as proof of UGEQ's marvelous work and the benefits which will continue to accrue to us from their tireless efforts.

Approximately six weeks ago, I sent away my application for a CRS card, an application which was correctly filled out, it might be noted. After eagerly standing by my mailbox every day for the past four weeks waiting for the postman to arrive, I naturally grew a little discouraged, and determined to take some concrete action in my typically activist manner. Certainly not wishing to even barely infringe on anybody's freedom of action, and sure that I would not want to deny anyone the benefit of the doubt, I carefully considered my actions before definitely committing myself to any set form of investigation and possible retaliation. I thereupon took my telephone and dialed UGEQ at 849-6291, to be informed that the CRS service had been discontinued at some previous time, unspecified, and that the men in charge "ont disparu". The question which we might ask our student leaders is obvious.

Soon, we must begin to extrapolate our thoughts into more basic areas. Many of us have allowed ourselves to be deceived into supporting an organization condemning a nation as being colonialist, expansionist, and imperialist, a nation which we hold dear; supporting separatism by militant action (i.e. terrorism); and supporting a doctrine of unilingualism, only to mention a few positions taken.

The immediate question of CRS, which prompted me to write this letter, is only indicative of a larger question which faces the students of McGill. The question must again be asked: what is UGEQ doing for us? Practically speaking, the answer must be nil. Last year's campaign statements that UGEQ is a good representative bargaining agent in Quebec city re student loans has shown itself to be hollow, as well, for there is nothing any interest group can do now or in the near future to improve the situation caused by a corrupt and backward government.

Something must be done; we cannot deceive ourselves any longer. What is UGEQ really offering us for our contributions to it, both financial and moral? I would really appreciate being answered in a logical and analytical, rather than emotion-packed, manner, without, preferably, a simple regurgitation of New Left dogma.

Some bridge

Sir,

File on you! You, who must have heaved a sigh of relief in your private corner of hell, should have the unmitigated gall, the outright audacity to rebuke the report of the Committee on Student Discipline!! You, who caused the whole commotion in the first place, not just by allowing the Reallat article to be printed in the Daily but also by consciously inciting your readers to jump to the unjustified conclusion that their 'wronged' editor would be given the maximum punishment, should be ashamed of yourself. The moderate decision of the Committee in no way contradicts any of their statements that they issued last December regarding the punishments they would mete out.

However, it is obvious that you are bent on pursuing the same misguided course in connection with Mr. Fekete's case. You are being overly pessimistic and entirely unjustified in prophesying that the Committee will condemn Mr. Fekete — or maybe you are putting into written words that which your mind believes to be the right (and maybe even desirable) decision of the Committee. As has been said before, 'don't cross the bridge before you get to it' (or some such thing).

monstrated to the satisfaction of the administration that present Union facilities were being used to capacity.

Bill McNamara, Co-ordinator of Student Activities, emphasized that "what is needed now is a task force to help plan for the union. The Senate, whose support is necessary for the extension, would like to see in black and white what the actual necessities are."

"A full survey of use and capacity of the union must be made, and for this we need a large group of interested kids who will work hard for the planned extension," McNamara said.

American U of T prof loses draft deferment

TORONTO (CUP) — A University of Toronto professor has been reclassified 1-a by his draft board because he is teaching in Canada.

Assistant Professor Parry Wellman, 25, a sociology professor from The Bronx, New York, claims his draft board has not given him the usual occupational deferment accorded university professors.

He said when he called his New York draft board January 26, he was told if he were teaching in the United States he would get a deferment, but "the fact you're in Canada teaching is grounds for reclassification."

Wellman plans to return to appeal the classification on medical grounds. He and his wife came to Toronto last July from Harvard, where as a graduate student he was classified 2-S.

He said he moved to Canada with his draft board's permission.

If he chooses not to report to his board and remains in Canada, he will become a draft dodger. Draft-dodging is a crime in the United States.

Draft evasion is not, however, an extraditable offense according to Canada-United States extradition agreements.

High-schoolers 'busted' for underground paper

OTTAWA (CUP) — Fifteen-year-old Shannon Lee is in trouble with her high school principal.

She was caught last week distributing Youthquake, Ottawa's first underground secondary school newspaper. All 75 copies were destroyed. The content is apparently offensive to the administration of Hillcrest High School.

Youthquake, consisting of three letter-size sheets, was printed by the Canadian Union of Students after a group of high school students decided the best way they could influence the direction of their education was to form a union.

And the union needed a paper to spread its ideas.

The paper received a mixed reaction from students at the four high schools where it was distributed. In almost every case some copies were seized by the principal's office.

In editor Richard Kowalski's class at Glebe Collegiate, the teacher denounced the paper as "communist-inspired."

Unruffled, Shannon Lee and Richard Kowalski plan to continue signing up members for the student's union (they now have over 100), and printing Youthquake.

Said Kowalski: "We know what we want to accomplish, and we'll do it."

Mrs. Ina de Pagter was born in Holland and educated in Amsterdam, where she lived under the German occupation. After the war she lived on the island of Curacao for four years, and in 1952 immigrated to Canada. As a witness to the atrocities of the last World War committed on the basis of religious, racial and ideological background not accepted by the Nazi regime, and as a result of her stay in Curacao, a melting pot of peoples, she became keenly aware of a need for a unifying force. In 1960 she accepted the teachings of Baha'u'llah, founder of the Baha'i Faith, and has since been an active member, serving on local and national bodies.
